HARDING PROPOSES NEW PLAN FOR SETTLEMENT OF NATION-WIDE STRIKE

Would Refer the Seniority Rights of Rail Men to Conference and Decision of the Railroad Labor Board, Determination to Be Final

APPEALS FOR RETURN TO WORK NOW

In Message to Rail Heads, President Harding Declares Only Question May Be Answered by the Federal Bureau in Deliberation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Harding in a new move to end the nation-wide railroad strike today, proposed that the seniority question—the chief obstacle to a settlement—be submitted to the railroad labor board for determination.

The president appealed to the striking railway workers to return to work, pending this decision.

Harding also asked that the rail executives agree to taking the workers back, leaving the seniority question to be decided by the government labor tribunal.

Harding communicated his new plan personally to Bert M. Jewell, leader of the strikers, in a conference at the White House, and T. De Witt Cuyler, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, in New York.

Harding pointed out that the executives had accepted the first two principles of his compromise plan and that the strike leaders had accepted all three. In his message to heads of the strikers and rail executives, the President said that only the question of seniority "remains in dispute and bars a settlement."

In view of the fact that both factions had agreed to abide by decisions of the labor board, Harding stated he felt that the seniority question, the chief point of the dispute, should be placed with the board for decision.

The President's announcement today of his new proposal confirms the exclusive announcement by the United Press Saturday that the executive had suggested to the strikers' leaders that the seniority question be submitted to the labor board for decision.

MINERS' TRIALS TO CONTINUE

CHARLESTOWN, W. V., Aug. 7. Preparation for the resumption of the famous Charlestown mine trials are under way today. John Wilburn, son of Rev. James E. Wilburn, recently convicted of murder in the second degree in connection with the armed march on Logan, faces trial August 7. Two other sons are also to go to trial. One of them, Frank, is now in jail here.

The Wilburns, father and sons, are alleged to have been in the party of 40 or 50 armed men which met and killed Deputy Sheriff John Gore and two of his aides.

Gore had mistaken the party for friends, according to Prosecuting Attorney John Chafin of Logan county. The union men demanded the password which was in vogue among the miners at that time. Still thinking the men belonged to the state side, Gore replied, "Amen," and fell with a bullet in his heart.

While Judge R. D. Baily, in Williamson, Mingo county, recently nollied cases involving several officials and members of the United Mine workers of America, these had nothing to do with the Charlestown trials.

The case of Walter Allen, charged with treason, will be taken up after the Wilburn trial. Allen is a union official of Dry Branch, Kanawha county. He is alleged to be one of the chief aides to the "general" of the march.

It's Hard to Tell What's What Along Line of Propaganda

Propaganda is a useful term, but "to know what's what in these days requires a keen perception," declares Henry James in commenting on news of the day in this evening's paper. There is all sorts of propaganda these days, and it is forwarded in various ways, but now comes propaganda "against the propaganda against war," and it leads Mr. James to the assertion that "This gives an endless opportunity as a chain letter scheme; there simply is no limit to it."

Fighting is as old as the ages, but the time has come when there are other means of settling great questions, without bloodshed and brutality. James W. Foley in "The Listening Post" this evening tells us in his philosophical way that the men who can come to agreement by reason and treaty and arbitrament, are the ones who are superceding the "two-fisted fighters foaming at the mouth and thirsting for blood."

It's just as important to give your mind a thorough cleaning as it is to renovate the house in the springtime. If you don't believe it, read the article by Dr. Edwin E. Slosson this evening. It's a most unusual article filled with good sound advice. You will find on the editorial page the other daily feature articles.

TRAGEDY AVERTED IN SWIMMING POOL

Alfred Hermann Dragged Out of Water and Revived

The first drowning in Glendale's muncipal plunge on West Burchett street was narrowly averted yesterday evening about 7 o'clock, when bathers dragged from the swimming pool the apparently lifeless body of Alfred Hermann, a 17-year-old boy, who jumped into water beyond his depth while endeavoring to reach a "safety swimmer."

Hermann had been in the plunge for nearly an hour, confining his efforts to swim in shallow water. He wached the swimmers dive from the springboard and railings into deep water and it looked so easy that he decided to try the same stunts. Climbing upon the railing he tossed his "safety swimmer" into deep water, and then with a long plunge endeavored to jump into the small ring that will hold a novice above water while he learns to swim. Hermann missed the ring, and went straight to the bottom of the plunge, which at that point was about 7 feet deep. The first time he came up feet first, and bathers paid little attention to him, again and again he went down and the third time was "pawing" the air for breath like a mad man when his head bobbed above water. One of the bathers went to his rescue, but got so excited that he gave up when the drowning boy very nearly pulled him under water. W. H. Stadt, of the Edwards & Wildey Co., saw the plight of the young man, and by desperate efforts, assisted by another good swimmer, dragged Hermann to the platform, where, after considerable work, he was revived. Aside from having suffered several bruises at the hands of those who pulled him to safety through the railing, Hermann seemed none the worse for the experience which very nearly resulted in his death. At the time Hermann made his venture the lifeguard was off duty for supper.

The several good swimmers in the plunge could not realize that Hermann was drowning, and were under the impression that he was merely "showing off," until the third time they saw that he was really drowning, and then went to his aid bravely in time to save his life. Had the plunge been crowded with bathers Hermann would doubtless have went to his death, as his struggles from the beginning were not noticeable except by those at his side.

The experience of Hermann will doubtless serve as a warning to the careless to "watch their step" in Glendale's plunge and not venture out beyond the deep water line unless they are able to swim. The occurrence certaintly made a strong impression upon the small number of people who had tarried late at the swimming pool, and indelibly impressed them with the fact that Glendale has a real plunge and that it is as easy to drown in this swimming pool as it is in the acean, if proper caution is not exercised.

FOUR ACCIDENTS IN SUNDAY TRIPS

The quiet of Glendale's Sunday was disturbed by four traffic accidents. Except for a bending of tin, there was little damage done. J. N. Anderson was driving a machine that collided with a car, the operator of which is unknown, the accident taking place at the corner of San Fernando and Doran street at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. No one was injured.

Henry Ginger, 605 East Harvard and Clyde Johnson were operating automobiles which came together at the corner of Central avenue and Patterson at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. Both cars were slightly smeared, but otherwise nothing resulted except excitement.

Machines driven by James O. Todd of Largo and Glorietta, and James F. Bready of Los Angeles, met at the corner of Brand and Broadway at 5:30 last night. The cars were somewhat damaged but no noe was hurt.

D. Ripley Jackson, 1800 South Brand boulevard, postmaster of Glendale, and C. D. Danford of Los Feliz road, were operating machines that collided at the corner of Los Feliz and Gardena at 5 o'clock last night. The damage was slight.

Her father, in a frantic effort to save his daughter, narrowly escaped death himself. Grasping the girl's hand as he saw her falling, he was pulled far out over the cliff. His grip gave way and Miss Jones plunged to her death while Jones clung precariously to the crumbling rocks.

A score of visitors to the park witnessed the tragedy.

Miss Jones fell just after she had posed on the brink of the cliff, for a photograph taken by her father.

FIRST TOTAL INDEMNITY OF $1000 IS PAID ON PRESS ACCIDENT POLIC

Family of Anthony Walker of Burbank, Killed in A Auto Accident, July 9, Receive Check From Captain Thomas D. Watson on Policy

PAID WITHIN ONE MONTH AFTER DEAT

Actually in Force Only One Week, Claim Forwarde Immediately on News of Death of Subscriber Without Contest or Application by Family

SWIFT PAYMENT OF PRESS ACCIDENT INSURANCE POLICY AMAZES FATHER OF VICTI

Captain Thomas D. Watson,
Managing Editor Glendale Daily Press.

Dear Sir: In acknowledging the receipt of the check for $1000 death insurance on the policy received with the subscription of my son, Anthony, to the Burbank Daily Press, I wish to thank you for the speed with which it was paid and for the consideration you have given the claim.

Before any effort had been made by us to collect the money you had already started the claim for us.

Like many others, my son took the policy with the subscription in the light of a joke, more than anything else.

It was offered as an inducement, and as such it was taken. While the check, nor any amount of money can make up for our loss, we feel very grateful for your interest in us and in our sorrow.

We thank you very much. Very truly, JACOB WALKER.

The first total indemnity for death in this district o the accident insurance given with subscriptions to th Burbank Daily Press, Glendale Daily Press, Eagle Roc Daily Press and the Los Angeles Express, was paid Thur day afternoon by Captain Thomas D. Watson, gener manager of the Glendale Daily Press, the Burbank Dai Press and the Eagle Rock Daily Press, to Jacob Walker Burbank.

A check for $1000 was handed to Mr. Walker yeste day afternoon at the chamber of commerce, Burbank, b Captain Watson, as indemnity for the life of his so Anthony P. Walker, of 21 Angeleno avenue, killed July 9 in an auto accident whole on his return home from a picnic.

The policy had been in force a week at the time of the accident.

Occurring on July 9, the policy was paid in full less than a month later.

The Walker family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Walker, their brother, J. C. Walker, and his sister, Margaret Walker.

The men are connected with the Burbank Planing mill.

It was only a week before the accident that young Walker had subscribed for the Burbank Daily Press at the earnest urging of a solicitor. He paid his first month and filed his application for insurance. The policy had been forwarded promptly, and deposited among the family papers, more as a joke on the young man than as of any particular value.

Returning home from a picnic trip to Brent's Mountain Crags, the night of July 9, young Walker was accompanied by three young friends, William Thompson, John McLaughlin and Jean Montandon.

As they turned the sharp curve on the Ventura boulevard near Calabasas, Walker apparently lost control of the machine. It skidded and then turned completely over. Walker was killed. His companions escaped serious injury.

On the report of the accident reaching the Burbank Daily Press, an investigation was made to ascertain if he was a subscriber to the Burbank Daily Press. On the discovery that he held a policy, the machinery of compensation to his parents was started in motion.

The check arrived Thursday at the office of the Glendale Daily Press. Notice was telephoned to the parents of the boy, and the check was carried to Burbank by Captain Watson and there handed to Mr. Walker.

Acknowledging the receipt of the check, Mr. Walker, in a communication to Captain Watson, declared that he had not realized the value of the policy.

Stories of Famous Cases

By Detective NICK HARRIS

THE CAUSE OF DIVORCES

In Two Parts (Part II)

"Now, of course, I have only picked on the male species, and to be fair I should mention a few facts concerning the other side and give them their just deserts, because you know what they say about the female species being more mummified, or something, because you know when they are mad, why that deadlier species wom is likened unto a bleating goat in comparison."

It was right here that I interrupted Jimmy and said: "Do you know, I believe that you are right, as far as the male species you mentioned are concerned, as I have seen these things happen many times myself. Now, with reference to the women, let me try to explain things that I, too, have seen.

"I recall once a witch calling at my office and telling me her husband had disappeared and she wanted me to find him. I asked her the usual questions to get the information for the purpose of identification, etc., and wound up by asking the lonesome woman if they had ever had any trouble. She raised her eyes to heaven and said, 'Bless you man, no. Our married life was ideal. Never a cross word. Bliss had reigned in our home like the lives of two doves in their twiglet nest.'

"I took up the trail from the little home town, feeling foul play had befallen the genial old gentleman, as nothing but a serious crime could have separated such a dear old couple as had been pictured to me. My entry in the home town was a happy event for me, as I was sure I could find some one who saw him leave and perhaps be the cause of my bringing back together this missing partner of the firm, thereby bringing gladness into the hearts of both.

"Imagine my discomfiture upon being greeted by laughter and gibes when I made inquiry concerning their fellow citizen who had so mysteriously disappeared but a few days ago. One dear old lady said: 'Is that old heifer bawling for her calf again? Why, man alive, he has gone to see his mother to find out if insanity runs in his family.' Another said: 'Yes, he left town because he had a chance to work in a slaughter house, and he wanted to know how much beating a brute had to take before it killed him.' With a few more of such remarks I made up my mind to find out what was the cause of this comment and why he left.

"Hence, upon investigation, I found that he and his wife had lived in a small cottage that one might think was the Temple of Filth. Discarded tin cans, rubbish, papers and trash scattered all over the yard where sweet wife had conveniently tossed them upon preparing her usual meals. The interior of the house looked almost as bad as the yard. Anything but neatness prevailed. On several windows I found blankets had been tacked up, and as I was afterward told, it was for the purpose of keeping the sun and draft out of the house, as she would allow no ventilation to circulate inside this Palace of Joy.

"It was one morning that the final trouble broke loose. Husband had arisen and because of the darkness of the kitchen, had torn down one of these blankets when he was informed that she was the boss there and to make it more impressive she backed it up by crowning him with a nice large coffee pot of hot liquid, and when he remonstrated with her, it was in the midst of an egg-frying episode, and having a nice large half-fried egg resting conveniently on the pancake ladle, she let this fly, making a safe hit on the pinnacle of friend husband's nose. This naturally riled the old gentleman up to such a state of mental distress that he left the house that same day, selling out his business, and left for parts unknown at that time.

"It took me some three months to finally locate him in southern Florida, where he refused to effect a reconciliation with his wife, but as I understand, made provisions to provide for her as he does not have to live with her.

"In cases of young married couples I have noticed many of their troubles start through petty jealousies caused sometimes by the new wife meeting and calling up former sweethearts, only to be found out later by the young husband. Where the seed of distrust has been planted, the green-eyed monster called jealousy creeps into the heart of man, and soon ends in the husband employing detectives to verify his suspicions, and in many cases the investigation develops into discovering clandestine meetings between said former sweethearts and others and ultimately ending in the hands of attorneys to be carried to its final resting place before the courts of our counties.

"So now you see, Jimmy, I guess that kind of backs up your argument and I hope, Mr. Watertown, that you will not ask me to try to suggest the cure for these most unpleasant features of our existence, further than to make these few friendly suggestions, that if men would only treat their wives as they used to treat their sweethearts, and if wives would only treat their husbands as they used to treat their sweethearts, the machinery of divorce courts of today would soon be reduced to a pile of rust and junk that would cause society to move it away and dump it in the place called oblivion, where it could sink from the sight of man, never to return, and allow us to enjoy our lives as originally intended by our Creator.

Tomorrow another Nick Harris detective story full of mystery and surprises.

BRIDE IS HONORED AT TEMPLEMAN HOME

Miss Lily Chudley Bride-to-Be of Ray Pearson, Is Honoree

Miss Lily Chudley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chudley, of 908 East Elk avenue, was entertained at a pretty afternoon tea and shower given in her honor Saturday afternoon, at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. J. Templeman, 325 East Elk street.

Except for two vocal numbers, "Because" and "Friend O' Mine" by the hostess, there was no program and the afternoon was one of informal sociability, with refreshments served about 4:30, at a prettily appointed table which had been beautifully decorated with flowers.

It was a glass shower and the honoree was the recipient of many pretty gifts. The list of invited guests included Miss E. Allen, Miss E. Newby, Miss G. Golding, and Miss Ray Matthews, all of Los Angeles; Mrs. Borthick and Miss L. Borthick, Miss Eva Illman, Mrs. John Chudley, Miss Elizabeth Chandler, and Miss Ina Whitaker, all of Glendale.

Miss Chudley is to become the bride of Ray Pearson of Portland, Oregon, but now employed at Arrowhead lake in the San Bernardino mountains, the latter part of September.

MISS COOKMAN IS HONOREE AT TEA

Shower for Bride-to-Be, Given at Whitehead Home

Miss Anne Cookman, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Cookman, was the honoree at a pretty afternoon tea and shower given for her Saturday afternoon by Miss Leila Whitehead, at her home, 354 West Burchett street.

The house was beautifully decorated with pink hydrangeas and sweetpeas, the flower last named beautifying the dining-table, where pink ribbons led from the plates of the guests to the beautiful centerpiece. At the end of each ribbon was a little parosol. These at the signal of the hostess were investigated and found to contain fortunes, one for each guest.

It was a kitchen shower and Miss Cookman was the recipient of many pretty and useful articles for the home, of which she will become the mistress after August 26, when she will become the bride of Earl Thompson.

Those present were Anne Cookman, Helen Gould, Irene and Alda Gervaise, Mildred Singleton, Marjorie Peterson, Eva Pixley, Virginia and Louise Fambrough and the hostess, Leila Whitehead.

GLENDALE CLUB JUNIORS MEET

Members of the Junior auxiliary of the Glendale Music club, who gathered at the home of Miss Marie Anderson on South Verdugo road Saturday night, had an exceedingly pleasant social evening and a good musical program, although it was entirely volunteer, the coming and going of members having made it impossible to secure a program in advance. There were piano solos by Vera Knapp and Marie Anderson, and vocal solos by Gertrude Heideman and Muriel Hively. Games and refreshments furnished the balance of the evening's entertainment, one of the games which proved highly amusing being a pantomime stunt in which a belle with four admirers received them and made them pose as pieces of furniture as each one was succeeded by another visitor. The four admirers were Lloyd and Lawrence Knapp, Alton Mattice and Forest Jordan, the belle being Marcella Webb, and the maid Mildred Thompson. At the end when the furniture was sat upon or otherwise put to use, there was a hilarious mixup.

When guests arrived each was given a bag of beans with instructions that the answering of any question by "yes" or "no" would mean the forfeit of a bean. At the end of the evening a first prize and a booby favor were bestowed upon those having the most and the fewest beans.

Members present were Marie Anderson, Mildred Anderson, Muriel Hively, Gertrude Heideman, Mildred Thompson, Ehtel Oliver, Veda Knapp, Lawrence and Lloyd Knapp, Alton Mattice, Stillman Chase, and Forest Jordan.

TRIANGLE MEETING OF TROPICO FOLKS

The Christian Endeavor meeting at the Tropico Presbyterian church Sunday evening, was led by Miss Phoebe Snell, and was what was termed "a triangle meeting." Recreation was the theme and point stressed was the need to make it serve the three sides of the triangle—body, mind and soul.

At the regular church service which followed, the men's club had charge. There was a song service led by Dr. St. Clair, responsive reading by William Malcolm, prayer by F. H. Wilcox, announcements by John Server, and a men's quartet sang "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

The topic of the sermon by the pastor, Dr. James F. Winnard, was "The Man Who Said He Would, and Didn't," that man being Peter, who denied his Lord.

VALENTINO AT THE T. D. & L.

Once in every woman's life comes a certain great moment. Once in her lifetime something comes to her on which her whole future depends. It has come—or will surely come—to you, just as it came to Aurora Meredith. What do you think it is? You will know when you see splendid Dorothy Phillips, the star of "The Heart of Humanity" and "The Right to Happiness" play this great part in a picture that every woman in the world will understand. A picture for which a whole opera was produced—in which the players sang just as they sing on the mighty stage of the Metropolitan—a dazzling production in which the social leaders of a great western city acted as the "extras"—a marvelous love story that you'll never forget. See it now. Don't miss it.

Remember — "Once to Every Woman," with Valentino, is at the T. D. and L. theatre today only.

LOCAL FIGHT CARD TONIGHT

Local fight fans are on edge waiting the outcome of the scrap tomorrow night between Ralph Meyers, of Glendale, and Howard Kendig, of Burbank. While this fight is the semi-windup of the card to be put on by the Modern Woodmen, it is attracting almost as much attention as the main go between Ralph's big brother Johnny, and young Stone.

King, of Burbank, has been substituted for Hooley, who was billed to meet "Kid" Essick in one of the preliminaries. This scrap is scheduled as one of the features of the card. Essick is practically a newcomer in the boxing game, but he is a go-getter. He has only had a few fights and in every fight has acquitted himself cerditably. He has the nerve and heart and best of all, he loves the game.

Mrs. Albert Leighton of 123 West Elk street, dramatic soprano, has been engaged to sing for Barker Brothers Broadcasting radio station this week.

"Ignorance!"

The speaker was an admiral, who was discussing at a dinner party certain strictures that had been passed upon the navy.

"Why," he went on, smiling whimsically, "that arm-chair critic is as ignorant as the girl on the Cunarder.

"This girl, crossing to England, got friendly with one of the ship's officers, a young man of twenty-five or so. The two were leaning side by side on the rail one day when the officer said:

"'There goes four fells. I must ask you to excuse me. It's my watch below.'

"'Oh, stop your kiddin'!' said the girl. 'Who ever heard a watch striking as loud as that?"

"Are those eggs fresh?"

"Fresh, mum?" replied the veracious dealer, in confidential tones. "I'll tell you how fresh they are, mum. Suppose a friend of mine was to come and say, 'Henry Tripe, I've got a quart of the finest liquor that was ever tasted by mortal man. I'm going to make a little egg-nog and I want you to be at the party.' Well, mum," continued the dealer after a dramatic pause, "them's the eggs I'd give him."

Why should a man expect to get his price if he has it?

Truths in Epigram

There are some things which men confess with ease, and others with difficulty.— Epictetus (60 A. D.).

Health is the second blessing we mortals are capable of.—a blessing money cannot buy.—Walton (1593-1683).

Many count their chickens before they are hatched; and where they expect bacon, meet with broken bones.—Cervantes

"NOBODY HOME"

"You beat your pate and fancy wit will come;
"Knock as you please, there's nobody at home."

Thus the acrid and cynical Pope was impelled to write by the spectacle of human folly. Thus also he gave classic setting to a phrase that has become current slang. "Nobody home" is an expression full of meaning. It implies mental vacuity. It means that the ivory dome wherein intelligence is supposed to have its seat, is ivory, nothing more, a void. That concerning many people the description "nobody home" is fitting and complete, is manifest. It goes far to explain the low moral ebb indicated by outbreaks of passion, by greed and violence. Inability to make distinction between right and wrong is the sign of intellectual inferiority. So also is the lack of desire to be guided by the better instincts when the response to these is deliberately denied.

Accepting the theory of "nobody home" as explanatory in any degree, it seems to explain many things. It accounts for the frequency of crimes, the contempt for authority, the light value placed on human life. It makes clear the readiness of men and women to marry without previous acquaintance, and to hold wedding vows as something lighter than air. The desire to heap up vast fortunes no longer remains a mystery. "Nobody home" tells the story.

Possibly this law governing individual conduct may be expanded logically to account for the course of nations, and of civilization. In this great world there might be prosperity, happiness and abounding comforts, not alone for the lucky few, but for everybody doing his share of work. The earth is ready to yield abundance of fruitage from its soil. Out of its deeps it gives coal, oil, precious minerals. In its waters is food in many forms. Its forests, properly safeguarded, would be inexhaustible. Its quarries and its clays supply material for the rearing of beautiful cities. But nations have turned from industry to wars and quarrels. They are stirred by covetousness rather than by ambition. They let the fallow soil turn back to barrenness and then permanent desolation. They fail in their systems of transportation though these might be perfect. They squabble as to dividing the profits among the classes, when there should be profit for every class. They act as though their collective brains had become addled, and their collective consciences seared. The result is that civilization, dissipating the elements of strength, totters towards collapse and darkness. This is no dream of pessimism. Unless there shall be a revival of intelligence, and thus a revival of morals, culture is doomed to vanish, knowledge to be less than a memory, and mankind to be plunged into a chaos worse than barbarism.

Over the wreckage, the historian of ages hence (provided some surviving germ of intelligence had blossomed into a new civilization), well might write as the epitaph, incisive and adequate "Nobody Home."

SPLITTING UP GERMANY

It seems to be the plan of France to take by force territory allotted to Germany by the terms of the treaty of Versailles. The intimation is received that private property also is to be seized in the effort to obtain a substantial slice of wealth in lieu of the reparation that Germany is unable to pay. Concerning such inability on the part of Germany may be cited the confirmatory opinions of a number of the great American financiers. These men do not speak out of sympathy alone for either party to the controversy. They have in mind the restoration of Europe to a sound monetary basis. They do not see how such basis is to be reached by crushing Germany. They do not find any ground for the belief that Europe, continuing as a hopeless financial ruin, could fail to include the western continent as an ultimate victim of the same catastrophe. Therefore their pronouncements, even if inspired by the desire to protect themselves, gain in emphasis and in apparent soundness.

Europe could not withstand the shattering impact of another war. This is a fact conceded by every publicist, and by every writer on economics. At the same time there are indications that Europe is preparing for more fighting. It is singular indeed, if the combined intellects of the nations cannot stay the progress towards a climax so unspeakably to be dreaded. A spirit of fairness, a little patience; bearing with shortcomings that are due not to purpose, but to sheer force of circumstances. To the extent of these suggestions all Europe must go. But if hatred is to be fostered as a virtue, adopted as a plan of action, there is hope neither for France, for England, nor for any other power of Europe.

A PECULIAR CASE

Three of the jurors in the Obenchain case, who from the first declared their belief in the innocence of the defendant, are said to have offered to put up the money for her liberation on bail. This is an expression of faith which probably must be regarded as without precedent. The woman has had two trials, and her alleged confederate the same number. No jury has come near to convicting the woman, although the escape of the man was by a narrow margin. The district attorney announces his determination to try them both until a verdict has been reached. In the circumstances this so leaves the matter in the hands of the authorities, that discussion of the propriety of the course might in itself be considered an impropriety.

The attitude of the latest jury seems to indicate that if the case is carried to a conclusion, the conclusion will be based on sentiment. Apparently the evidence adduced lacks power to convince. Whatever moral certainty may be entertained by some as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoners, the fact has been made reasonably clear that jurors carry their convictions into the box when they take their oaths, placing small reliance on testimony presented by either side later.

These trials do not serve to recommend highly the present jury system. Surely if the method were effective, trials consuming many weeks would result in the determination of something.

WHAT IS DEMOCRACY?

By DR. FRANK CRANE
ARTICLE IX

This article takes up the ninth point of our definition of Democracy.

Democracy is (1) a Force (2) of Opinion (3) and of Feeling (4) operating within the People (5) enabling the Majority of them (6) to Get what they Want (7) by means of Organization (8) and to make these gains secure by Laws, (9) for it is only by making its own Mistakes that a nation can (10) achieve its destiny, which is to Grow.

DR. FRANK CRANE

We here wish to point out the truth which many of us overlook; that it is only by being allowed to make our own mistakes that we can develop.

A child grows by burning its own fingers, bumping its own nose. All life is a succession of errors; that is to say, a succession of experiments by means of which we learn what is harmful and what is beneficial.

Life is an art; it is not a science. An art is something to be learned in the doing of it; a science is something you can learn out of a book before you do it.

We learn to live as the artist learns to paint, or as the musician learns to play the piano; by constant trial and the overcoming of failure.

And we must remember that Democracy has to do with the life of the people and not with rendering them a perfect machine.

People are always asking how to succeed; but the most important thing is to know how to fail; that is, how to profit by our sad experiences and to improve ourselves and not to be ruined by them. And we only learn this when we do our own experimenting.

Democracy is a continuous experiment. It is always trying and trying again. And thus only does a nation grow into adulthood.

Monarchy has had its place in the earlier stages of civilization just as there is a place in the childhood of men for parents and school teachers. But grown-up men cannot be kept forever in leading strings, and the whole object of the school teacher is to develop the youth so he can take care of himself.

Democracy is the world coming of age. At present it is young and like a young man it is undergoing a good deal of storm and stress; but it is only by passing through this period that it will reach maturity. It cannot be forever kept in tutelage.

Little Johnny can never grow up if grandpa does everything for him. He must make his own efforts. For a while it may be all right to say at every juncture, "Let Grandpa do it for you," "Grandpa will show you how."

All other kinds of governments except Democracy are Grandpa governments.

And eventually a people that is in the habit of making its own mistakes and learning from them, is stronger than a people that has learned nothing but to obey.

Germany had an autocratic government, and so a perfect military machine. It was so perfect that when it attacked the world very many thought it was all-powerful. But it only required time enough for the great democracies to collect their forces, and it was overwhelmed.

It was said, for instance, at the beginning of the war, "Oh, Great Britain will muddle through somehow." She did. She muddled. But she muddled—through!

The reason was that Great Britain has been making mistakes for a thousand years and knew how to make them. If you don't believe this, ask the Irish.

There was only one other nation that could excel Great Britain in the art of making mistakes and that is the United States.

We made plenty of them in the war, yet we were able to get 2,000,000 soldiers across 3000 miles of ocean in time to land the knock-out blow in the great encounter.

And that is what a nation needs as it is what a man needs.

QUERIES
(Find the error in this article)

Firstly

Irving Kramer: "Kindly advise me whether it is correct to use the word 'firstly'?" Answer: It is not incorrect to use FIRSTLY as an adverb, and occasionally it is used in that way. However, FIRST, as an adverb, is used far more frequently, and is in better taste; as, FIRST, there is the question, secondly, the decision.

Is a Baby "It"?

Joseph Stumer: "Is it correct to say, 'How old is it?', when one is referring to a baby of unknown sex, or must one say, 'How old is the child?'" Answer: Under the conditions mentioned either expression is correct.

Antecedent of "It"

"Dolly": "In the statement, 'It is raining', what is the antecedent of the pronoun 'it'?" Answer: The word "it" has no antecedent in the foregoing sentence; it is used impersonally.

Tomorrow Is (Or Will Be)?

"Tensely Doubtful": "Kindly tell me through your column which of the following sentences is correct: 'Tomorrow is Wednesday'; 'Tomorrow will be Wednesday'." Answer: WILL BE is preferable, as the future is undoubtedly implied. However, examine the following: "No man owns tomorrow. Tomorrow is the fool's day." (S. Weir Mitchell); ". . . tomorrow is a feast of the Lord" (Bible). If the thought involves the nature of TOMORROW use IS; if it expresses futurity use WILL BE.

THE LISTENING POST

Fighting.

That seems to be as old as human beings are.

Or as the human race.

The resort to brute strength.

To arbitrate differences with the fists or with bludgeons or knives or guns or whatever weapons may be handy.

* * *

And naturally there is enough in us of the primitive to find a kind of unholy admiration for the fighting man.

Or the fighting spirit.

Reasonably clean and wholesome people sometimes go to the prize ring.

And see two physically matched brutes batter and hammer each other.

For a price.

* * *

The admiration for the fighting spirit was high in Rome of the Caesars.

They had a coliseum where fights could be staged before tens of thousands.

Fights to the death.

Fights between gladiators and between beasts and between men and beasts.

* * *

The arena of the Caesars saw the most desperate bloody and brutal examples of the fighting spirit in the world.

People grew to look upon everything as tame except that spectacle that was sprinkled with blood.

And that ended in death.

* * *

Lecky says the gladiatorial combats and the lust for the sight of blood and death in mortal combats was one of the elements of the destruction of the Roman civilization.

Fighting brutalized the people.

Slavery corrupted them.

Bribery with corn and gifts weakened them.

And the spirit that is weak, corrupt and brutal will not last.

So fighting merely as fighting is not an especially admirable thing.

Whether a man is a one-fisted, two-fisted or two-fisted and two-footed fighter.

It is a revision to brute type.

The value of the fighting spirit depends on what it is fighting about.

* * *

It is not admirable merely because it likes to fight.

Merely because it has a hard head and hard fists and a love for battering and hammering.

This is believed to be a civilized age.

When men aim to compose differences by reason and good sense rather than by force and bloodshed.

So the fighting spirit often stands in the way of peace.

Of arbitration and treaty and reason.

* * *

The man who is spoiling for a fight usually gets it.

The nation that is spoiling for a fight usually gets it.

Germany was spoiling for a fight.

And it got it.

Germany was a good old two-fisted government.

But its two-fistedness did not serve the world very well.

* * *

We are seeking in these days to survive by reason and treaty and arbitrament rather than by force of ships and arms.

And our two-fisted fighters foaming at the mouth and thirsting for blood are being gradually put aside.

In favor of men who are alert to the possibilities of life without war and bloodshed.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Absence—By Richard Jago (1715-1781)

With leaden foot Time creeps along
While Delia is away:
With her, nor plaintive was the song,
Nor tedious was the day.

Ah, envious Pow'r, reverse my doom;
Now double thy career,
Strain ev'ry nerve, stretch ev'ry plume,
And rest them when she's here.

MIND-CLEANING TIME

By DR. EDWIN E. SLOSSON

Housecleaning time, when every article of furniture from cellar to garret is handled and dusted, occurs traditionally each spring. Annual purification of the spiritual nature, when we overhaul and furbish up our morals, is set by all the churches. We are urged to subject ourselves to periodic physical examinations.

Yet it is quite as important to keep our minds in good condition as our houses, our consciences or our bodies. Error is as contagious as disease. A false belief may make more trouble in the world than a wrong intention.

Vacation is a good time to overhaul your brain from the frontal lobe to the cerebellum. Review your axioms, revise your postulates, and reconsider the unexpressed minor premises of your habitual forms of logic. All your reasoning, however, correct; all your knowledge, however great, may be vitiated by some fundamental fallacy, carelessly adopted and uncritically retained. Get a lamp and peer into all the dark corners of your mind. No doubt, you keep the halls and reception rooms that are exposed in conversation to your friends in fairly decent and creditable order. But how would you like to let them look into your cerebral garret and subliminal cellar, where the toys of childhood and the prejudices you inherited from your ancestors mold and rot?

Hunt out and destroy with great care every old rag of superstition, for these are liable at any time to start that spontaneous combustion of ideas we call fanaticism against which there is no insurance. The bigger the brain the more dangerous such things are, for they have the more fuel. A little decaying superstition in the mind of a great man has been known to conflagrate a nation.

Errors breed errors. They multiply like microbes, especially through neglect. A single false belief may infect all the sound facts you pile in on top of it. Better an empty room than a rubbish heap. In the words of our American philosopher, Josh Billings, "it is better not to know so many things than to know so many things that are not so."

Go systematically through your intellectual equipment and see wherein it is deficient. Add annuals to your mental cyclopedia. Pick up each one of the sciences where you left off at school and bring it down to date. Look over the fields of art and literature to see what you have missed or misconceived. Don't let your sociology get too far behind the age. See that your philosophy and psychology bear the same date as the calendar. Examine your religious creed in the light of modern knowledge to see if it needs revision. Take down the atlas and consider how long it has been since you heard from each country. Visit the planets in turn. Take another view of ancient history through the telescope provided by modern scholarship.

This inspection of one's stock of ideas is necessary because they do not keep as if they were in cold storage. They do not remain unchanged when stored away and neglected. There is a lot of thinking going on in our brains that we do not know anything about. Ideas are apt to sprout or spoil, like potatoes in a cellar. Facts will ferment from yeasty thoughts until they intoxicate the brain. Falsehoods generate ptomaines, poisoning the mind and producing inexplicable disease and death. You can not be too careful. Clean out your mind at least once a year.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

WHY?

[St. Paul Pioneer Press]

National guardsmen dispatched to Bloomington, Ill., by the governor of Illinois to preserve order and prevent rioting in connection with the railroad shopmen's strike at that point, were greeted "with jeers and ribald comment" by strikers and their sympathizers, and sentries put out about the guard encampment were made the targets of snipers. At the same time it is announced to the president of the Chicago & Alton road that the brotherhood men will not work under the protection of guardsmen.

The guardsmen sent to Bloomington are representatives neither of the strikers nor the railroads. They represent the government of the state of Illinois. Their orders are to preserve the peace and to enforce the law—the law which upholds a man's right to cease working as well as a man's right to work if he wishes. Why, therefore, should these uniformed young men representing the dignity and power of the state be "greeted with jeers and ribald comment" and made the targets of hidden snipers. The American people will expect a prompt answer to this question.

WHAT ALL WANT TO KNOW

[Chicago News]

"What is to be done about the Herrin massacre?" asked a Washington newspaper. That is what the people of Illinois want to know.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

To know what's what in these days requires a keen perception. So much that passes as one thing is so entirely another, that the mortal who doesn't get fooled occasionally, becomes by this entitled to a place among the immortals.

HENRY JAMES

"Propaganda" is a useful term. There was a time when people seemed to get along very well without it. They used to get along without the telephone or matches. Now they are accustomed to "propaganda" and in its absence would have a hard job in recording their impressions.

Much propaganda may be recognized at a glance. The bolsheviki are very frank in their efforts to flood the world with it. The doses are so large and noxious, however, that the stomach of intelligence, so to speak, is likely to revolt at it. Nevertheless, the parlor bolshevist gulps it all eagerly. Then by gentler methods the p. b. seeks to spread the poison, mostly by cozing it.

Many stories presented as fiction in magazines of high class, are poorly disguised propaganda. They may be designed to instruct the working person to be content with his lot (not realty). Their purpose may be to warn the capitalist to watch his step, lest the worker give him a devastating biff. In either case the propaganda peers out of the cloak of narrative, a skeleton at the feast of reason and flow of soulful warning.

There is propaganda against war. Now comes propaganda against the propaganda against war. This gives as endless opportunity as a chain letter scheme; there simply is no limit to it.

Othoman Stevens quotes "a cultivated man of literary achievement" as having said recently "I don't think Robert Louis Stevenson should be read; his life was so lacking in respectability."

Othoman Stevens is a kindly gentleman. Otherwise he never would have classed the author of the sentiment cited, as "cultivated."

* * *

"Folks are getting pretty nasty nowadays" remarks an aged pioneer. He had in mind as he spoke the habit of holding people up, or killing them as an incident of robbery.

The venerable citizen remembers the days of '56 in these parts, and regretfully observes signs of deterioration since then. There is no chance to take exception. It would not be respectful to old age. Moreover, all the facts favor his contention.

* * *

Concerning the shooting of a speeder who had declined to halt at the command of a Los Angeles policeman, a full knowledge of the circumstances must precede judgment.

There have been many speeders who by that act became murderers. Many more go at a rate that makes of each a potential assassin. When a policeman seeks to stop them they evade him if they can.

Lately the streets and highways have been marked by frequent robberies, most of the robbers traveling by automobile. This fact tends to bring the speeder under suspicion of being worse than a transgressor of traffic rules.

At this writing the theory that the victim of the bullet had mistaken the officer for a bandit is deemed reasonable. But there would not be such reckless shooting if the prevalence of crime had not put the nerves of the police everywhere on edge.

* * *

In a recent lecture a professor of political science declared that common sense was to rule the world. He thought that the spirit of combat was dying out, being absorbed by understandings between nations, and that soon war would be stopped forever.

Three cheers for the professor! More of his optimism would be an excellent thing. Just at present many mortals fail to have more than a trace of such emotion.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

My grandfather was a harsh, stern, old man, who believed in treating his grandchildren rough. That's why I liked him, I guess. I do not think I could have put up with a mollycoddle grandpop. If I made a fool break with grandpop I got the flat of his hand. But if I behaved like a real grandson, with hot meat in him instead of sawdust, I was treated like a man. Many's the time he licked me into ridges, but the first big grief of my life was when he died.

"Get out of that 'why' habit," the old man growled once. "Stop it. Don't be a fool."

Yesterday at the vacuum bottle counter the old man's objection to whys came to mind. The woman who elbowed me was listening to the girl clerk.

"Before you put anything hot in the bottle," said the clerk, "temper it with boiling water. In that way you prevent the heat of the food being wasted to heat the bottle."

"Oh, yes," said the woman who elbowed me, brightly. "I understand. And do you have to do that each time you use it?"

That girl clerk was a heroine. She didn't bat an eye. She did not reach over and bean that customer with an iron wedge or fall shrieking on the floor. She said with a smile and a bright eye that, yes, indeed, this process of warming up must be gone through each time the bottle is used. Not even a vacuum bottle will stay warm indefinitely. This is without doubt one of the mysteries of nature. The other mystery is how a woman who has as little sense as the one who elbowed me can learn to drop the pennies in a pay-as-you-enter. It seems incredible.

Yet that woman has been smart enough to pay for her house and put a raw rah-rah half-way through college and graduate one of the prettiest little daughters I ever saw after her husband died and left her with a scrofulous business and a mass of debts. I'd hate to trade horses with her. She'd trim me down to a mere murmur. But she has this vacuous "why" habit. She asks fool questions rather than put her mind at work. When she can she leans on some one else.

Or else that part of her mind that counts is off somewhere making a living for her. But she doesn't flatter the rest of us when the other part of her mind keeps a conversation alive with such absolutely idiotic "whys."

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA E. STEWART

A new organization of women has just had its birth in one of our largest cities. Its platform is the very latest word in feminine enthusiasm, embracing the following planks:

To end grand juries.

To abolish all charitable agencies, institutions and organizations, substituting government activities along these lines.

To provide state control of all dentists, doctors and surgeons.

To establish public ownership and operation of all public utilities.

To stop all immigration until every one in this country has a job.

To establish the initiative, referendum and recall of elected and appointed public officials.

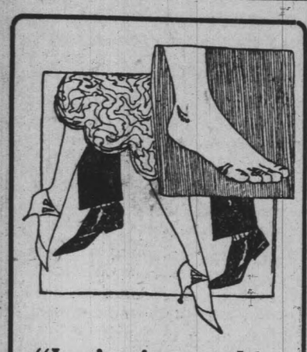
This is not all. There are other planks. It's a big, big program that these women have mapped out. But of course "our reach must exceed our grasp, else what's heaven for?" Even in the pre-Victorian days of the Brownings this sentiment had voice.

The most serious objection to this new organization is not in its ideas, radical as some of them are, but in the fundamental idea behind their framing—the necessity of a new organization to further them. We're so over-organized now, we Americans! The dissemination in upkeep and overhead expenses takes materially from our working forces. There are enough ways in which to work with older, existing organizations.

Isn't it so?

THEODORE THOMAS' WIDOW DUE IN L. A.

Mrs. Theodore Thomas, widow of the famous director and composer, and honorary president of the National Federation of Music clubs, is expected to reach Los Angeles the first week in September. A meeting was held today at 10 o'clock in the music department of the Los Angeles public library to plan for a fitting celebration in honor of Mrs. Thomas. Mrs. E. W. Kinney, of this city, represented the Glendale Music club at that meeting.



"Let's sit out this dance!"

How many people suggest this because their feet hurt?

Dancing is one of the most popular pastimes today. It requires absolute foot-comfort to be a real pleasure.

Years of experience have made possible the wonderful aid we are giving to those afflicted with corns, bunions, ingrowing nails, fallen arches and other foot maladies.

MERCHANTS' TEAM DEFEATS CLEARY OUTFIT

Visitors Sent Home With Score of 5-3 in Hotly Contested Game

The Cleary Athletic club received a decided jolt at the hands of the Glendale Merchants yesterday, when they were sent home with the little end of a 5 to 3 score. During the past few weeks the arthletic club has maintained a wonderful winning streak, but it took the home boys to put a kink in this continuous string of victories.

Heidler, the Glendale twirler, fanned fourteen of the visitors and held them down to four hits. King played his usual heady game at the backstop birth. In fact, every boy on the teams played especially good ball.

Following is the lineup and box score:

DEMOCRATS SEE CANDIDATE FOR U. S. SENATE

Opening his campaign for the United States senate on the Democratic ticket, W. J. Pearson yesterday made a brief stop in Glendale, en route to San Diego, and a series of political meetings.

Pearson, 50 years old, is one of California's largest rice-growers. His home is in Los Angeles, but his major farming interests are near Willows.

He has never sought political office, and became a candidate now only after a meeting of more than 500 Democrats in San Francisco recently unanimously urged him to do so.

But she wouldn't let him finish. cat!" she spat out. "That's t what Bobby saw. What would squirrel be doing at a house? u're lying, too. It's all some g-fool of a joke you've pawed ether with that pesky coon."

"Madam," growled the Red Dog erely, the bristles rising along spine. "A dog never lies. I ommend you go and use your n two eyes on Frisk—and your gue as well. He needs it. u'll be in plenty of time if you rt right now. And I'm sure d'll be very glad to have you p him." (You see Pal hadn't pped to learn that Mrs. Thom- meant to wash him).

"You mean it's another awful ss Tad's gotten him in?" The dow thought it best to change tune. Louie Thomson's house s a long way off. She saw her- f traveling all that way just to t in some good hard licks at the end. "Let Tad clean him up, if that's the kind of care he takes of him. You dogs always brag about seeing justice done. You let Tad steal my little son, and then when things go wrong you come down here for me to take care of him. But everybody, to the very birds, can pick on a poor lone window."

"Madam," he retorted, "I perceive you would rather make trouble with your tongue than clean it up. Let me assure you, your affairs had nothing to do with my coming to the Pond. Ripple Beaver sent for me. If you're willing to let go my ears, I'd like to hear what she has to say." He stalked off, leaving her to tell her troubles to Bobby Robin.

NEXT STORY: TROUBLE ON FOOT FOR DR. MUSKRAT.

A Year Ago Today

An entertaining program marked the first August meeting of the local post of the American Legion, last night at Legion headquarters. A part of the evening was given over to business of a varied nature, and a luncheon was served "a la mess line," to top off the ceremonies.

Persons in this part of the San Fernando valley who are interested in the Hollingsworth oil field, on the Hollingsworth ranch, three miles west of Burbank, are experiencing thrills today because of indications of oil, which appear to point to immediate production of value.

The men who broke into the tailoring shop of A. Gelmor, of 138 South Brand boulevard, have been arrested at Long Beach, and confessed to the theft. They are being held by the police of Long Beach. They have converted some of the stolen silks into skirts and petticoats, for sale. The remainder of the loot they sold. The police of Glendale, Long Beach and Los Angeles are trying to trace the missing goods, although little success is expected.

A certain young man had an amazingly large mouth, which he contorted into an all-pervading smile whenever he wished to make a good impression. His sweetheart had persuaded him to "ask father," and the youth was determined to show himself to good advantage.

Mr. Jenks," he began, stretching his principal feature to the utmost of geniality, "I have come to ask for the hand of your daughter. I——"

"Just a moment," interrupted the old gentleman, mildly; "would you mind closing your mouth for a moment till I see who you are?"

TRAIL OF THE SLAIN LAMB IS THE GOSPEL

So Discourses Rev. Mr. Preston At Pacific Avenue Church

The Red Trail—"The Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." (Rev. 13:8).

Here is the Gospel in a nutshell. Lord, open our eyes and quicken our understanding that we may behold wonderful things out of thy word.

Three mysteries appear; and in them are involved the three fundamental facts of our religion. Pause here, friends, if mysteries appall you; for it is a faithful saying, "Truth dwells at the bottom of a well;" and only the rope of faith (which is "the evidence of things not seen") unrolling from the windlass of desire, can draw it up.

We live in a world of mysteries. We eat and drink and breathe mysteries every moment of the day. To lay my finger on my throbbing pulse is to touch a mystery that neither science nor philosophy can explain or even define. The question is not whether I can comprehend this or that. But is it a fact? As a fact it may go beyond reason; but unless it is absolutely unreasonable I have no alternative but to accept it.

The first mystery here unveiled is the incarnation. We stand by the manger looking down into the fact of a child in swaddling bands. Thus the God of all good Christians was of a woman born. Who shall cut this Gordian knot? "Great is the mystery of godliness, God manifest in flesh; the angels desire to look into it!"

But wait a while and you shall recognize this child, now grown to manhood as the Antitype of all the firstlings of the flock slain upon the altars of the ages. John the Baptist sees him walking by the banks of the Jordan and salutes him: "This is he of whom I said, there cometh one after me who is preferred before me. Behold the Lamb of God!"

The second of the great mysteries is redemption. This brings us under the shadow of the cross. "Behold the Lamb slain!" Sin is death, as it is written "the soul that sinneth it shall die." The life is in the blood; wherefore "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin."

What is Christ doing yonder on the cross? In the oldest of the historic creeds we say, "I believe that he descended into hell." This explains the cross, so far as it can be explained at all. He bore the penalty of the world's sin, so that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish but have everlasting life. He drank our cup of retribution to its last purple dregs. Down, down, and deeper down He descended into the outer darkness until the bitterest cry that earth ever heard escaped from His parched lips, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" Deeper he could not go; for the uttermost hell is where God hides his face. So the very heavens were bent to save us!

The third of the mysteries is everlasting grace. And now, with the seer in Patmos, we are gazing on a throne high and lifted up whereon sitteth one as a Lamb that had been slain; that is, bearing the scars of sacrifice, a sacrifice accomplished from the foundation. For this Melchizedek of ours hath neoither beginning nor end of days. He was always the Lamb slain and always will be—"the same yesterday, today and forever."

His yesterday goes back to the beginning—before the mountains were brought forth or even the world was formed. The tragedy on Golgotha was no after-thought. It was the consummation of a divine plan as old as eternity. It has for its prologue all prophecy and for its epilogue all history. The cross casts a luminous shadow backward over the unrecorded ages of the past and forward beyond the last syllable of recorded time. There never was a moment when the Father did not intend to give His only begotten Son, or when the only begotten Son did not intend to give Himself to death for us men and our salvation. It was foreordained before the foundation of the world, by the fixed counsel of the Divine will.

And what Christ was in that eternal yesterday He is today. If His is the upstanding figure in the van of every movement looking toward the betterement of the world, and the ultimate triumph of truth and goodness, it is not as the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, but as a Lamb slain upon the altar of the world's despair. He triumphs not because He once lived among men, but because He died eternally for men. As He sits upon His mediatorial throne just now—"ever living to intercede for us"—the marks of nail and spear are still upon Him. Let Charles Wesley sing it:

"Five bleeding wounds He bears,
Received on Calvary;
They pour effectual prayers,
They strongly plead for me;
Forgive him, O forgive, they cry,
Nor let this ransomed sinner die."

And as Christ is in the fleeting but momentous instant that we call today, so shall He be throughout the never-ending tomorrow. When all the detours of men and nations are ended and the groaning and travailing world has come by the red Trail to the wounded feet of the King eternal, immortal, invisible, all history will be read in the light of altar-fires gone by.

For there is no progress except in the charmed circle known as "Christendom;" and the power of Christendom is precisely measured by its loyalty to the cross.

The deplorable leanness in many of the churches of our time is due alone to the lack of redeemed blood in their religion. "Thus saith the Lord: in returning shall ye be saved and in confidence shall be your strength." Bring back the crimson ensign! Behold the Lamp of God!

The red Trail that began at the beginning and ran through prophecy to the cross is being continued through subsequent history and will so continue clear to Heaven's gate. The cross which Constantine saw in the starlit sky the night before the battle of Saxa Rubra is still there, and over it the same legend, "In this sign conquer!"

The church that does not recognize that sign may have a name to live, but in the campaign of the kingdom, it is as dead in efficiency as a painted ship upon a painted sea.

"I, if I be lifted up," said Jesus, "will draw all men unto me." Other attractions may be used to draw men to church; but the cross is the only magnet that can draw men back to God.

HARDING APPOINTS CALIFORNIA WOMAN

Mrs.A.B.Spreckles and Her Children

Mrs. A. B. Spreckles of San Francisco has been appointed by the president to be a special representative of the department of labor, and commissioned to investigate conditions among women in industry in Europe. The appointment is similar to that of the late Lillian Russell (Mrs. Alexander P. Moore), who also investigated immigration conditions for the department.

"What we want to discover," said counsel, "is who was the aggressor."

"Eh?" said the fierce-looking witness, doubtfully.

"Let me explain," said counsel, patiently. "If I met you in the street and struck you in the face I should be the agressor."

"You'd be an idiot," muttered the witness.

"No, no. You don't understand. If I struck you without provocation I should be committing an act of aggression."

"Excuse me, boss, you'd be committing suicide," declared the witness, darkly.

A man would rather go to jail than a reception if he could get out as quickly.

Children's Games

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Has it ever occurred to you that the games which children play—especially their group games—are other than mere modes of recreation?

Would it surprise you to be told that they are profoundly significant from more than one point of view—that they actually link the dim beginnings of the human race with the splendid promise of what the race may be centuries from now?

Such is the belief held by those who, as scientific students of the evolution of mankind, have closely concerned themselves with the interesting problem of why certain games are played by children almost everywhere.

These games—games of tag, hide-and-seek, hare and hounds, prisoners' base, etc.—the scientists find to be what they call vestigial. That is to say, they regard these games as vestiges or remnants of what in primitive time were the chief activities of adults—the chase, war, flight from enemies, and so forth.

Hence it may be said that children are impelled to play them through the force, not so much of tradition and imitation, as of racial inheritance. Even racial inheritance, however, would hardly have sufficed to insure their preservation did not some degree of usefulness still attach to them. It is the belief of the scientists that a high degree of usefulness attaches to them.

If the occupations of adults no longer are what they were in the times of neolithic man, the qualities which then counted for most in making life successful count for much today. In particular it is necessary for the adult of today to be enterprising, quick-witted, mentally as well as physically vigorous, and above all, socially adaptable.

The group games of childhood—including the vestigial games—serve the great purpose of quickening and fostering these most desirable qualities. Most of all do they help to establish the consciousness of social unity, without which individuals are doomed to failure and society to go backward instead of forward.

All of which emphasizes the importance—not always appreciated either by parents or by civic authorities—of giving children encouragement and ample opportunity to play group games. The playground movement of today is a happy sign of increasing recognition of the developmental aspect of the games of childhood.

But the playground movement is as yet only in its beginnings. And in too many of the places where it is most needed—cities and large towns—it has hardly made even a beginning. Professor O'Shea's words of fifteen years ago hold painfully true even now:

"The chief count against the city is that it does not provide proper conditions for either the physical, intellectual or social development of the rising generation, so that each generation may preserve what the race has accomplished before it, and make additions thereto."

BEBE IS SOME "GAME CHICKEN"

Have you a little Spanish grandmother in your home?

"It's your loss if you haven't," says Bebe Daniels, star of "A Game Chicken," which opens at the Glendale Theatre Sunday.

Miss Daniels has a quaint little grandmother who is, in her way, as interesting as the pretty star of Realart Pictures herself. Eva de la Plaza Griffin is the daughter of a one-time governor of Colombia. On a trip to Buenos Aires she met the American consul in that city, and married him as the culmination of a real international romance. Mrs. Griffin traces her descent from the Empress Josephine of France.

When Mrs. Griffin learned that her granddaughter was to do a picture with a lot of Spanish atmosphere, she took from her trunks the relics of her youth; fine shawls and mantillas, rare and beautiful fans and jewelry. Many of these appear as costumes and "props" in the picture, and Mrs. Griffin, as interested as any young girl, was nearly always on the stage when Spanish scenes were being staged.

"A Game Chicken," was written for Miss Daniels by Nina Wilcox Putnam, the well-known fictionist, and the scenario was prepared by Fred Myton, under the supervision of Elmer Harris. The supporting cast includes Pat O'Malley, Hugh Thompson, Martha Mattox, James Gordon, Gertrude Norman, Chas. Force and Mattie Peters.

Two Japanese words, very similar in sound and spelling, have very different meanings. One means "ridiculous," and the other "splendid."

A visitor to Tokio was proud of his linguistic attainments, but he did not fully appreciate the importance of the difference between the two words.

He mixed them up most fatally, as the following instance will tell.

One day he had occasion to go to felicitate a Japanese acquaintance on the arrival of a new baby.

The European visitor spoke in fluent Japanese something to this effect:

"I hear, sir, your wife has a new son. How ridiculous!"

A well born but impecunious colonel owed a considerable sum to his tailor. The latter, who had a large and flourishing business, was very ambitious and desirous of getting into a good social circle. He therefore suggested to the colonel that in lieu of paying his debt he should introduce him and his wife to his friends. In the end the colonel agreed, and not long afterward the tailor received an invitation to dine. In the full glory of perfectly fitting evening clothes the colonel failed to recognize him, so as he shook hands he said, very quietly:

"Pardon me, my dear sir, I quite forget your name."

"Quite likely," said the other equally quietly, but in a sneering tone, "but I made your breeches."

"Ah, yes," said the colonel, with a smile; then, turning to his wife, he said: "My dear, allow me to introduce—Major Breeches."

ASK EXTENSION OF LIGHTING DISTRICT IN TUJUNGA

Petition Supervisors to Place 25 Additional Lights on Highway

TUJUNGA, Aug. 7.—Twenty-five additional lights will be placed along the highway between Monte Vista boulevard and Pennsylvania avenue if a petition signed by residents in the district and presented to the board of supervisors takes effect.

The petition calls for the extension of the present Tujunga lighting district to take in the territory mentioned. Granting of the petition will close the present gap between the Tujunga and the La Crescenta lighting districts and make the state highway a lighted boulevard through the valley.

P. T. A. Begins Festival Work

Mrs. B. B. Reynolds has been elected to head the Moon Festival committee from the Parent-Teacher association and will direct the festival work of the organization.

The P. T. A. expects to do considerable work this year and is getting an early start.

New Route Map Prepared

A new route map of the Tujunga valley has been prepared by R. W. Blake of the Tujunga sign shop, showing proposed improvements and features put through since the preparation of the last map.

The map is remarkably clear and easil yunderstandable. Cuts are at the Verdugo Hills Record office in sizes suitable for use on the back of business letterheads, postcards and busines scards.

The detective was defending his view that silence is the best policy with regard to crimes still under investigation.

The reporter's opinion was that publicity in the newspaper was the better way.

At last, to prove his case, the detective quoted an instance:

"I remember the case of a man who had some hams stolen from his warehouse. He missed them at once, but said nothing about his loss to anybody.

"A few days after the robbery a man who did occasional jobs in the house called, and after saying 'Good morning," he added: 'I was sorry to hear that you had some hams stolen the other night.'

"'Your information was right,' replied the tradesman in a low, confidential tone. 'But don't tell anybody. You and I are the only ones who know anything about it!"

The reporter had to admit that in that case silence paid.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE PRESIDENT AND THE MULE

Warren Gamaliel Harding, President of the United States, rode into Marion, Ohio, on a mule, when a lad. He rode out years later on an elephant.

• • •

Both animals will have to split the credit fifty-fifty.

• • •

Why the President kept the mule ride a secret all these years is hard to explain. It would have cinched his election to the presidency beyond the slightest doubt. Had he told the story during his campaign instead of at his home-coming a few days ago, he would have won over the three men who cast their votes for Cox.

• • •

Perhaps nothing will win the support of the American public more than proof that a candidate once did a very humble thing. Of course, other than humble men can ride mules. But not if the mules know it.

• • •

The fact that Lincoln once split rails helped to make him President. Garfield split logs, and was the "From Log Cabin to White House" candidate. Washington split cherry trees. Roosevelt split parties.

• • •

Today the boy who starts out in life with a determination to be President is under a great handicap. It is much harder to find mules and rails than it used to be. And the parties are pretty well split.

• • •

As he neared the sleppy little village of Marion, he heard the church bells ringing. And you'll notice that in his speech he says nothing about hurrying the mule. The chances are he put on the brakes until positive the services had started.

• • •

Little Warren was swayed by many emotions on the trip. Whether the mule noticed any or not will never be known. Probably the mule had no idea he was carrying a future President of the United States.

• • •

It is doubtful if it even thought it was carrying presidential timber.

• • •

Otherwise it would have put in an appearance at Washington by this time with the other claimants to office who "knew him when."

• • •

But had the mule shown up at the White House with the rest of the office seekers after Warren's election the probabilities are the President wouldn't have recognized him; it is so darned hard to tell one mule from another!

• • •

Still, there are those who will insist that the mule is alive today. Democrats and other critics of the President's actions will even aver that he still has it, and, very likely, as his chief cabinet adviser. Which is very unkind. Both to the President and the mule.

• • •

However, one thing is certain: the President did much to boost his stock with the American public by his confession of the mule ride. The voters eat that sort of stuff. His re-election is certain unless the democrats find a candidate who can prove he rode two mules.

• • •

In that event the next campaign may become a contest between mule riders. It's a sure fire campaign issue. The only chance a third party will have will be to launch a candidate on a platform that as a boy of seven he slept with a dog.

• • •

Ultimately, of course, the mule idea will cease to be popular. Then for the candidate with the slogan: "He kept us out of mules!"

PEARSONS TELL OF WORK IN AFRICA

Return From Mondombe With Tragic Tale of Great Effort

Sunday services at the Christian church were of unusual interest because the pulpit, morning and evening, was occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Earnest Pearson, but recently returned from mission work in Mondome, Africa, with many interesting things to tell of conditions in that dark land, and the progress of uplift work.

Dr. Pearson spoke in the morning and stated that the territory allotted to the nineteen protestant missionary boards in that section is about 1500 miles square, extending from 5 degrees above the equator to 13 below. It is a land of magnificent distances, he said, the main station of the Disciples of Christ being Bolenge, 700 miles up the Congo river and at the mouth of a large tributary to that great stream. Missionaries bound for Bolenge must take a steamer at the mouth of the Congo and travel 100 miles to the foot of the cataract, then by a narrow gauge railway to the head of the cataract—a two days' journey by day as neither trains nor steamers run at night. From the end of the railway is a 7 days' journey in another steamer to Bolenge, where is located the largest Christian church in the world, having a membership of over 8000. Connected with this church is a Christian Endeavor society having 4000 members.

The station at which Dr. and Mrs. Pearson are working is Mondome, 1000 miles up a large tributary of the Congo, and the trip is made in the Oregon, a small steamer donated to the cause by missionary societies of the state of Oregon. There are four other stations of the Christian church in this region.

Dr. Pearson dwelt on the needs of the fields, the greatest being hospitals, as the missionaries get their greatest hold on the natives through curing them of their many distases. He spoke very hopefully of the outlook in that section. After two years' service, he and Mrs. Pearson are having a year's furlough in the United States and are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Learned of Glenwood road, Mrs. Willard Learned and Mrs. Pearson being sisters.

Mrs. Earnest B. Pearson gave an interesting account of conditions of life in the Congo, at the evening service of the Central Christian church, Sunday. After she had told of the demands of the work and the need, not only of religious teachers but of physicians, instructors in agriculture and the industries, who could help in the work of uplifting the degraded natives who are ignorant and childish, but not cruel or vicious, she said. "But there is plenty of missionary work to be done right here in the United States, plenty of degraded, destitute people in our own land who need uplift as much as these savages in Africa."

The greatest obstacle the missionaries encounter, she said, is the degredation of the women and children, who are merely chattels to be bought and sold or exchanged. The women do most of the drudgery, the agricultural work, fishing and cooking, and if the meals are not abundant and on time, they are beaten by their lords. They are in such a state of degredation that they have no sense of the decencies or moralities of life and it is hardly possible to get at them or make any impression upon them. Only in the orphan girls, who are taken into the mission schools is there any hope of raising the standard of womanhood. There is no such thing as a harmonious marriage, because the men and their wives quarrel continually unless they have become christianized.

The men and boys, who hunt when they feel like it, and have more leisure than the women, are more easily reached and influenced, she said.

The missionaries in the stations live in houses quite similar to the dwellings they are accustomed to at home. Native boys are taken into the household as domestic servants, where they can be educated and taught. Often five or six are thus employed. Some will cook, others will wash, clean and sweep, and the missionaries thus relieved of household drudgery, can give all their time to mission work. For their food supplies they have to depend largely on the tinned goods, especially prepared for the tropics, but this is supplemented by the antelope meat, fruit and fish brought to them by the natives.

The natives live in small huts made of sticks plastered with mud and thatched with palms, which leak terribly. In the warmest weather when the missionaries are striving to keep cool, you will find the Africans crouching over a fire. They seem susceptible to the slightest chill. Their cooking is done in smaller huts in the rear. Many a native boy who seems to be grading up, relapses into savagery when he marries a native heathen woman. For that reason the problem of elevating the status of women is the big one.

Mrs. Pearson said that no effort was made to persuade the natives to wear clothes until they desired to do so and in their nakedness they were much more picturesque than in clothing in which they appeared awkward. Their lives are terribly barren. They do not think, they do not know to read until taught by the missionaries and their only form of social amusement is the dance, which often lasts all night. They are very musical and have a great sense of rhythm, using the syncopated forms in their own native music and they quickly make their own, any foreign air they hear, not only learning it, but singing it well.

THE PATRIOTS

Lives there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said:
"This is my own, my native land,
And when I hear its weather panned,
No man will rise as soon as I
And tell a proper weather lie?"

"If some strange knocker says it's hot,
I'll rise up there and say it's not,
Thermometers may soar up high,
But in a country where it's dry
You do not feel the heat, you see,
As where there is humidity!"

"And when in field and lane and town
The summer sun comes blazing down,
There may be heat out in the sun
But in the shade there is quite none;
The reason for it is quite clear,
We have no humid atmosphere.

"And through the summer as a rule
The nights are always fine and cool,
I sleep with comfort and delight
Beneath a blanket every night,
Indeed, I like the summer best,
I get such sleep and grateful rest."

Lives there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said:
"This is my own, my native land,
And I will lie to beat the band
About its weather. And I do
With eloquence, and so do you!"

Babson's Letter

VICE-PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AT THE BABSON INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE GIVES GOOD ADVICE TO LABOR AND CAPITAL.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Aug. 7. — During the past few months Calvin Coolidge, Vice-President of the United States, has been giving great thought and study to the labor situation, owing to the coal and railroad strikes. In view of the masterful way in which he handled the Boston policemen's strike in 1919, he was invited to the Babson Industrial Conference to state his position on this momentous question.

Mr. Coolidge assumes we will accept labor unions, and that capital, labor and management will unite in bringing about a true industrial democracy. But—he states fearlessly that no democracy—political or industrial—can survive without discipline, organization and obedience. There must be law and order. Boards of arbitration must be created and obeyed in order for the wage workers themselves to get on. His own words are as follows:

"We need a fuller realization and a broader comprehension of the meaning, both of political and economic democracy. In this age of science and invention and organization, there is a special need of a full understanding of the foundations of industrial democracy. The word democracy is used very inaccurately. It is often taken to signify freedom and equality. Many have thought it represented an absence of all restraints. Others have considered it as providing a relief from all duties. The people of America have long been committed to democracy. The best thought of the world has been compelled to follow them. The easy way to understand what may be expected of it is first to understand what it is.

"There has never been any organized society without rulers. The great power of mankind has been created through unity of action. This has meant the adoption of a common standard. In most ancient times this was represented in the chieftain. In modern times it is represented by a code of laws. The important factor to remember is that it has always required obedience. Democracy is obedience to the rule of the people.

"The failure to appreciate this double function of the citizen has led to much misunderstanding, for it is very plain to see that there cannot be any rule of the people without a people to be ruled. The difference between despotism and democracy is not a difference in the requirement of obedience, it is a difference in rulers. The American citizen is at once a sovereign and a subject. He becomes an absolute sovereign by absolute obedience. He will be a limited sovereign if he limits his obedience. The criminal loses his freedom. It is easy to see that democracy will have attained perfection when laws are made wholly wise and obedience is made wholly complete.

"One of the great tragedies of American institutions is the experience of those who come here expecting to be able to rule without rendering obedience. They have entirely misconceived the meaning of democracy. But they need not disturb its defenders. To cast it aside could only mean the acceptance of some old kind of rulers which have already been discarded. The true hope of progress lies only in perfecting it. Already it is better than anything else in the world. But it rests entirely on the people. It depends on their ability both to rule and to obey. It is what they are. The government is what they make it. This same principle has been working out in our economic and industrial life. We are slowly, and of course painfully, arriving at a state of democracy in this field. In its development it has been analogous to the development in political life. It is not very long ago that the man who owned an industry assumed to be the absolute lord over it. He ruled it. He fixed the hours and the conditions of employment and dictated the amount of wages. He recognized little or no obligation towards his employees and had little regard for his customers.

"In large enterprises the ownership gradually became more and more divided with the advent of the corporation. In that case, oftentimes the management was entrusted to representatives, while the owners corresponded to absentee landlords.

"Under this system, as soon as employees could organize and make demands, a condition existed which led to the most violent and bitter of industrial disputes. All hands were eagerly asserting their right to rule, forgetful of their obligation to obey.

"Investigation and experience have gradually brought about the recognition of the correct principle. Time and economic development will insure its adoption. Industry is changing from the theory of exclusion to the theory of inclusion. It no longer is content with one small part of the individual, it seeks to enlist all its powers, to recognize all his rights as well as require the performance of all his obligations. In the ideal industry, each individual would become an owner, an operator, and a manager, a master and a servant, a ruler and a subject. Thus there would be established a system of true industrial democracy.

"In very many industries this is already taking place. Employees are encouraged to purchase stock in the corporation and are provided with credit facilities for such purpose. This gives them ownership. They are encouraged to make suggestions for the better conduct of the business. They are requested to apply their inventive ability in the various mechanical operations. Through trade unions and shop committees they have a large share in the determination of wages and conditions of labor. By the introduction of the sliding scale and piecework they share in the general prosperity of the concern. This gives them management. Thus industrial democracy is being gradually developed.

"There is a principle in our economic life that needs somewhat more emphasis. Long ago James Otis declared that kings were made for the good of the people and not the people for them. It needs also to be remembered that the people are not created for the benefit of industry, but industry is created for the benefit of the people. Those who are employed in it are its chief beneficiaries. Those who have acquired capital provide the plant and machinery for the workmen. Those who have acquired skill in organization provide the management for the workman. The manager secures the raw materials and markets the product. Capital and management perform this great service for the benefit of the workman. He performs a corresponding service for them. Unto each who contributes in accordance with his ability there is due equal consideration and equal honor. There is no degradation in industry, it is a worthy enterprise, ennobling all who contributes to it. It will be successful in accordance with the opportunity given for the development of all the powers of mankind and of the acceptance of the obligation alike to rule and to obey.

"The disappointment which has been experienced, at first thought, in the increase of power, whether of wealth or place, has resulted from the expectation that it would bring relief from the necessity of obedience. Neither political nor industrial democracy can relieve mankind from the requirement of obedience. There is no substitute for virtue. Too much emphasis has been put on the desire to rule and too little on the obligation to obey. More and more all social problems must be worked out in accordance with this principle. An obedient nation would possess supreme power. The law of life, the law of progress, is the la wof obedience, the law of service.

"'Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant.'"

CITY HALL BIBLE CLASS ADDRESSED BY BROOKS

Large Attendance Marks Return of Popular Leader

A large number of men attended the meeting of the Presbyterian men's Bible class in the council chamber of the city hall Sunday morning. Mr. W. A. Horn, president of the class, who has been east for several weeks, had charge of the meeting.

Rev. Keith L. Brooks, the class-teacher, who is editor of "The King's Business," had for his topic: "Jesus — God Manifest in the Flesh."

Next Sunday the title of his lesson will be "Jesus—the Lamb of God," in the latter part of John I.

Some of the most profound teachings in the whole New Testament are found in the first chapter of John's Gospel. The purpose of the Gospel, as stated in 20:31 is to prove the Deity of Christ. The burden of its exhortation is that men might believe. In all but two chapters, we are exhorted to believe, the word occurring 101 times.

"In the beginning was the Word." This sounds like the opening verse of the Bible, but Gen. 1:1 has to do with an act done in the beginning, the creation of this world, while John 1:1 has to do with a Being who existed in the beginning. Therefore John 1:1 takes us back into the past eternities, prior to all beginnings.

The title, "Word" is applied to Christ, the Son of God. The 18th verse says "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, He hath declared Him." A word is an expression of a thought. Humanity had searched in vain for the way to connect the Infinite with the finite, some way to make God intelligible to man. Jesus in His incarnation is the expression of the thought of Deity in terms that man can understand. He was the naked Truth about God. Thus the generation of the Son of God is thrown back into the dateless eternities of the past. He was pre-existent. Col. 1:15 tells us "He was the image of the invisible God, begotten before all creation."

"The Word was with God and the Word was God." Here we have a puzzling statement. He was Deity, yet He was a distinct person from God the Father, the invisible God. God is Deity at its fountain head. Chris is Deity in its outflow to men.

We are next told that "all things were made by Him and that without Him was not even one single thing made." There are many Scriptures that tell us that the Father created the world through the agency of the Son. The Apostle Paul says: "Through Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible" (Col. 1:16-17). We read in Genesis that God said "Let us make man." The reference was evidently to the second Person of the Trinity.

"The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Here we have the union of the Infinite with the finite. Christ did not cease to be Deity when He took upon Himself the form of man. He was both Son of God and Son of man. God could not be adequately declared in literature or in creation. The Word became flesh, and expressed God by living a perfect life under ordinary circumstances, then giving that life for the salvation of the world. The Son of God became the Son of man that the sons of men might become the sons of God.

The incarnation is the most reasonable thing in the world. Some years ago there was a fad of imprisoning ants under glass globes for the purpose of watching their working. An infidel was watching one of these ant colonies, and as he marveled at their seeming intelligence, he mused as to how it might be possible to be of assistance to them and convey to them human intelligence. He reasoned that the only way a human being could impart any instruction to them would be to become an ant while yet retaining the human intelect. Someone pointed out to him that this was exactly the way God revealed Himself to the world. Looking upon man in his sinful condition, God could not but long to instruct him and save him. It could be done in only one way. "God was manifest in the flesh."

"The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father." The 12th verse says: "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believeth on His name."

Jenkins was always trying to borrow money, and his friends had begun to avoid him.

One morning he tackled an acquaintance in the street before the latter had a chance to escape.

"I say, old man," began Jenkins, "I'm in a terrible fix. I want some money badly, and I haven't the slightest idea where I'm going to get it from."

"Glad to hear it old boy," returned the other promptly. "I was afraid that you might have an idea you could borrow it from me."

WHEN GRASS WAS IN PORTLAND

Days of Old Recalled by Old Washington Resident

SOUTH BEND, Wash., Aug. 7.—Folks who travel the streets of Portland seldom stop to think bac kto the days when high grass grew where flivvers honk today, or reflect upon how the old burg might have looked before the first axe was laid to the first tree.

Judge John Nathan Skidmore, who died here July 23, at the age of 89, remembered how the first tree sounded when it fell, and could recall how the now populous valley looked before the first house was raised.

Judge Skidmore was born in Lincoln county, Kentucky, in 18, in 1833, coming to Oregon in 1853 via. first class passage on a canvass-topped frontier Pullman, sometimes known as a prairie schooner. He lived on the present site of Portland for a time, and was married there. Later he lived in several different places farther down the Columbia river, where he served as justice of the peace. He was a member of the Oregon mounted volunteers during the Indian wars of 1855-56.

In 1871 the judge moved to South Bend, staking out a 160 acre farm, the site now of a goodly portion of this city. One of the streets of Portland's east side is now named for the judge.

Bill was looking for work. He had tramped about all day, inquiring at the different places where there was any possibility of a casual laborer finding a job.

At last he came to the great gates of a factory owned by Messrs. Doolan, O'Connor & Murphy. He asked the foreman if he could give him a job.

"We're full to burstin' wid men now," said the foreman, "but 'if yez come along tomorrow it's meself that might be givin' a job to yez."

"Right," answered Bill, "I'll be round all right." Then a shade of suspicion entered his brow. "You're not kidding me, are you? There really is a chance of a job?"

"Bless the man, ain't I telling yez. It's like this. We've got a man wid us now who isn't here, and, begorra, if he isn't here tomorrow I'll be after tellin' him he needn't stop, and it's yourself can have the job."
